

Rajiv Satyal - The Funny Indian Your High-Brow, Fun-Size Comedian

Rajiv Satyal is the small, bespectacled Indian guy from Ohio whose witty and TV-clean act covers everything from racial issues to soap bottles to his favorite topic – himself. He has opened for many nationally-renowned comics, including Dave Chappelle, Kevin James, and Kevin Nealon. Rajiv has opened for Russell Peters in sold-out auditoriums across the U.S.A.

Rajiv Satyal

May 12th 2007, Saturday
Time: 7:30 PM - Show Time

(Indian Appetizers are available for purchase at 7:00 PM)

Location: Unitarian-Universalist Fellowship
2945 NW Circle Blvd • Corvallis, OR 97330

Who is this funny man?

Rajiv is an Indian comic who performs a clean act that resonates with Middle America. He describes his humor as “intelligent, witty, and occasionally funny.” Rajiv was born and raised in Cincinnati, Ohio. He worked at the world headquarters of Procter & Gamble, where he performed at many P&G and other corporate events.

Rajiv was often heard on various Cincinnati radio stations, seen in many local newspapers and magazines, and found on-stage regularly as an MC and a Feature act at Midwest comedy clubs and colleges. He now lives in LA as a full-time comedian. You can find Rajiv online at <http://www.myspace.com/funnyindian> and www.funnyindian.com.

So, what's his act about? It takes the audience on a journey, while conveying a key message of diversity, which helps to break down stereotypes: We're all different and we're all the same. Rajiv thinks that with each person who learns to assume the best about others, we can make the world a better place. Sound lofty? It is. Can he do it? We'll see.

Cost: $15/- per ticket

To Purchase Tickets

Visit: www.fasis.org

Call Us: 541.908.4003

presented by

 fasis

foundation for the arts and sciences
of the indian sub-continent

“1 of 2 Indian Comics in the US to Watch” -Russell Peters

Children 12 and under not recommended.